Tarzan was a novel series created by Edgar Rice Burroughs. The first novel, "Tarzan of the Apes," was published in 1914 and was quickly followed by numerous sequels and spin-offs. The series was first published in serial form in 1912-1914 and was later compiled into books.

Burroughs created a rich universe called Barsoom, which is the planet Mars, where the series takes place. Tarzan, the protagonist, is a son of a human man and a chimpanzee woman, giving him a special connection to both species.

The series includes many adventures that take place on Barsoom, exploring different regions such as Thark and Pellucidar. Tarzan's abilities and adventures are enhanced by his knowledge of pan-ape languages and his connections to various factions and leaders on Barsoom.

Tarzan's character development and the series' themes of survival, courage, and friendship continue throughout the novels, making them enduring works in the science fiction genre.
